Our Preschool program is set to start the day after Labor Day. We are looking forward to a fantastic semester of exploring, skill building, critical thinking, and discovering the fun in learning. Countless research articles and papers have repeatedly addressed the way preschoolers learn: THROUGH CHILD DIRECTED PLAY. Getting their hands into sensory materials, interacting and manipulating all sorts of play components, exercising their bodies, using their imagination to start a game or play, and doing for themselves builds ground foundations for future learning. Using language to interact and solve conflicts, negotiating terms in a play, and considering others feelings are important skills that will continue to grow and improve as children move forward in their learning.

We thank you for choosing our preschool for your child's learning.

P.S. we do learn letters, numbers, and colors also. 😊
